FOUR DAY ANNIVERSARY

OF THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY IS A PHYSICAL IMPOSSIBILITY.

Citizens in Interviews are of One Mind that More Time Must be Given to Celebration.

The facts presented in the last issue of the Compiler showing the physical impossibility of holding a four days' celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle was carefully read by our people, talked over and the conclusion reached, as far as we have been able to learn, every one being of one mind that the great celebration which is to be of a national character can not be made a success if attempted to be pulled off in four days' time. The Compiler does not stand alone in its opinion as to the facts but our citizens are practically a unit on the subject and many of our citizens have encouraged us by asserting that we were absolutely right and to keep at it until the commission realizes the situation.

Before presenting our views last week, we were present at a meeting of the citizens' committee appointed several years ago at a public meeting to promote the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary. Dr. J. A. Singmaster is chairman of this committee and other members are Judge S. McC. Swope, Hon. W. T. Ziegler, Hon. Theodore McAllister, Hon. M. A. Garvin, Wm. Arch. McClean and D. M. Wolf. At the meeting Judge Swope was not present, being out of town. Sicknes prevented attendance of Hon. M. A. Garvin and D. M. Wolf has been removed from the town. The other members met with the chairman and the question of a four days' celebration was discussed at length and the insurmountable difficulties why a celebration of that length was an impossibility were elaborated and it was unanimously concluded that the chairman, Dr. J. A. Singmaster, should communicate with General Wagner, asking that the commission send some one to Gettysburg to thoroughly study the situation so that the possibilities of the town would be known by the commission before their plans were made final. Dr. Singmaster sent such a communication to General Wagner. While the commission has as yet sent no one here to study the situation it has been indicated that the town will be given a chance to be heard at an early meeting to be held in Washington.

Gettysburg people want the celebration to be as big and as successful as it can be made. They are unable to understand why it should be confined to a four days' celebration when the success of it will be imperiled by so doing. They want the thousands who will want to come to Gettysburg to have a chance to come here. They want them to have a chance to see the wonderful National Park which has been created here. They want every visitor coming to this Mecca of American Patriots to enjoy every minute and carry away pleasant and cherished memories, and to see Gettysburg in the throes of a struggle with a gigantic crowd can not but leave a nightmare memory.

Because Gettysburg has handled crowds of 10,000 for several days or of 25,000 for a single day is no criterion to judge the capacity of a town to care for five or ten times such a number for four days. A National Guard camp of 10,000 has required a thousand acres for their comfortable accommodation and a crowd five times that number would require more territory in tents than covered by the battlefield from the edge of town to Round Top and the Battlefield of the Nation would present a sorry sight to the visiting veterans as a city of tents with all their accommodations. Again would a commission propose to risk the success or failure of a national event on the weather for four days. A great storm on any one day could make of a city of tents a mud hole breeding disease and of the whole affair a most dismal failure.

The Compiler has interviewed a number of our citizens on the facts presented in our last issue and in every instance we have had corroboration and have yet to hear the first suggestion of any disagreement.

Dr. Wm. A. Granville, President of Gettysburg College, where nearly 100 students are being educated, said in an interview, "I certainly agree with your view that a celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary could not be put through successfully in four days' time. The veterans and the public could not be given any manner of comfort or convenience that could be called decent. The occasion and the proposed elaborate plans demand a length of time for their interpretation, exhibition and enjoyment. You can quote me strongly on this view."

Postmaster C. Wm. Beales declared emphatically that a "four day" celebration would be a failure both as far as the town was concerned and the visitors. That a four days' chance would be no inducement for the business men of the town to assume any risks and that a four days' celebration would be such a crowded, unsatisfactory thing to the visitors that the town would be more hurt than helped, that the visitors would leave with impressions that might keep them from ever returning. In my judgment I believe it would take a month to hold a proper celebration of the event, one which would reflect credit on the town and the commission responsible for it.

Hon. D. P. McPherson said he was "entirely in sympathy with the sentiments expressed in the Compiler against a four days' celebration. I consider the holding of a four days' celebration to be impossible, both in the carrying out of the details thereof as contemplated and also from the point of view of accommodations. I am of the opinion the commission should plan for the celebration as though the town of 4,000 inhabitants did not exist and the responsibility was up to them to care for the veteran guests and the general public. A town of our size should not be looked to or expected to take much part in the huge celebration that is planned. The commission should prepare to assume the entire responsibility of the occasion. This town, however, can be counted upon to go to its limit in helping in the care of the people, and the success of the celebration would be assured if sufficient time was given for it, but a four days' celebration with the proposed elaborate program is in my judgment an impossibility and time should be given to carrying out the plans so as to be a credit to the State and Nation."

H. T. Weaver of the Dry Goods firm of G. W. Weaver & Son declared that in his opinion "it is impossible to hold the celebration as planned in four days," and endorsed all the views presented by the Compiler. "A four days' celebration could not be made profitable to the business men of Gettysburg, so as to justify any expenditure by them in preparation for it. A four days' fair would mean a loss to the business men, but a longer time would justify outlay and expenditure to contribute to the success of the celebration."

J. Frank Hartman of the Gettysburg Department Store, who has had much experience in helping to provide provisions for the big camps held here said he "heartily approved of the position of the Compiler that a four days' successful celebration was an impossibility. That preparations to provide provisions for an enormous four days' crowd would be such a plunge that it would be doubtful whether any of our business men would be willing to take the risks. To stock up to meet the emergency and run the chance of a fizzle of a four days' show was not an inviting prospect, but to divide up the crowd so that the provisioning could be done over a period of weeks would give the business men a chance and make possible a satisfactory service to the visitors and is the only way the celebration could be successfully pulled off."

Dorsey Dougherty of the Dry Goods firm of Dougherty & Hartley, said he had "carefully read the article in last week's Compiler and believed every point presented was a conservative one. I know of people in the far west already planning to come in 1913 and from these and other sources I believe that 1913 would see a general movement of a great many people toward Gettysburg and that this movement could not be accommodated or confined to four days. I believe your suggested figures to be conservative. I am looking for the total of people who will come to Gettysburg in 1913 to reach enormous figures. The records of the Battlefield Commission show 200,000 annual visitors. It is possible for the figures for the anniversary to exceed this number and when the town saw its limit with 12,000, a four days' crush of enormous numbers would mean a gigantic failure for the celebration. It is an event to which weeks should be given."

Dr. T. C. Billheimer, a veteran of the Civil War, declared that "in his opinion the Compiler was perfectly right in saying that a four days' celebration was impossible," and added, "It is impossible to take care of half the number you suggest, or 50,000, in the way they should be cared for. In my opinion the celebration ought to be planned to cover a month or two months. A number of State celebrations could be arranged in which veterans and people of a State North and a State South, could participate. Or a number of States from which small crowds would be expected could be grouped. Each week there could be one or two grand gatherings and the special features proposed by the commission could be scattered so as to attract those interested in such features, and in a way that they could be comfortably handled."

Robt. C. Miller, proprietor of the Jennie Wade House, after narrating the troubles of the committee of which he was chairman in helping to place hundreds of visitors during the two-day dedication of the Pennsylvania Memorial in September 1910, declared that it was "impossible and impracticable to pull off a four days' celebration. Pennsylvania in 1910 brought here over 7,000 veteran survivors of the Battle of Gettysburg. Many of these brought members of their families and the total crowd was estimated at 12,000. A house to house canvass of the town was then made for accommodations, college and other public buildings were used and while the great mass were cared for, the town was up against the utmost it could do. Pennsylvania will furnish about one-eighth of the survivors of the battle North and South and if the veteran guests of 1913 were confined to these survivors alone and members of their families a gigantic crowd will be the result. But there will be thousands and thousands of veterans who did not fight at Gettysburg who will come to Gettysburg in 1913. When a National encampment of the G. A. R. attracts often from 30,000 to 40,000 veterans we have a right to expect a much greater number of veterans specially as the States will furnish transportation to many and with their families and the general public the total figures are bound to be something enormous. The celebration should be pulled off in a way to make it possible for every veteran and citizen of this country desiring to come, to be here, and this is only possible by making it a celebration of weeks instead of days. It is a very grave question in my mind whether these veterans should be taken care of in tents, not tents, close quarters near the ground, with risk of storms might produce a condition disastrous to the health of men of their age. Shelter in barracks or temporary structures had better be provided for the veterans and tents for the younger generation, and dividing up the visiting veterans by States or corps or in some other way they could be given the best of protection and care and the celebration made a most happy event for the veteran."

The Compiler voicing the unanimous sentiment of this community urges the commission to determine upon a celebration covering weeks instead of days. Ask the Nation to provide a temporary building for the exhibition of the arms of the service as they were in 1863 and as they are now. Decide to erect a temporary State exhibition building, for battle flags and other memorials. Put up barracks or temporary structures for the veteran guests. Arrange with the Nation for the erection of temporary auditorium in which the many reunions, gatherings and great celebrations could take place and in which veterans and public could be protected from any interference by the elements. To plan any celebration without provision for protection from the elements would be to risk a disaster that would be monumental in character the memory of which would be a never ending injury to this town.

J. A. Cox, local agent of the Reading Railroad, said, "I read your article in Compiler of last week with great interest and heartily agree with all that has been said about the impossibility of a four days' program for the Fiftieth Anniversary. Having had years of experience in handling crowds to and from the battlefield I would say that it is impossible to carry out the program as tentatively outlined. The four days' program is impracticable as figures will demonstrate. Should Veterans' Day be participated in by twenty thousand veterans and that estimate is low, and marching eight abreast on Hancock avenue, the parade would be over three miles long marching them close or of usual distance apart over five miles and it would require the veterans to be in line five or six hours. Many of the veterans could not stand it. It would be a physical impossibility for men of their age. Should 100,000 people view the parade, they would line either side of Hancock avenue seven deep from the Cemetery to Round Top. Should exercises take form on a huge campfire with 20,000 veterans on the platform, the platform would cover two and a half acres and an audience of 100,000 would cover ten acres and from experience it is impossible for an audience of over 3,000 in open air to hear speakers."

On Military Day a small number of troops would not be able to make an imposing spectacle and to bring a sufficiently large number on the day following Veterans' Day would add to the difficulties of transportation and subsistence. Civic Day, composed of civic organizations from the cities and State would add further complications of transportation and all these objections would apply to the National Day if the celebration is confined to four consecutive days. None could hear but a favored few and there would be many veterans who could not stand the heat and fatigue and the ceremony might as well not be had as far as thousands of veterans would be concerned. The time of a four days' celebration would be so completely filled by proposed program that many veterans would return home without seeing the battlefield. The crowd would be so dense as to make impossible any means of transportation over the battlefield and it would be impossible for the veterans to walk the 35 miles of avenue.

There are almost insurmountable difficulties in transporting such a large number to and from Gettysburg and although the number of veterans to be transported might be known and provision made for them but no estimate of the general public can be forecasted and great complications from this source would ensue. I think four to six weeks would be required to hold the celebration as planned."

New County Officials.

The county officials elected last November took charge of their offices on Monday and having filed their bonds and taken oaths of office were on hand to discharge their duties and to the new officials the Compiler wishes a Happy New Year.

Polthornary, T. Marshall Mehring. Clerk of the Courts, Wm. E. Olinger. Sheriff, G. R. Thompson. Register and Recorder, E. H. Berkeheimer.

County Treasurer, Geo. E. Spangler. County Commissioners, Noah Beamer, S. McC. Eicholtz and Samuel G. Keagy.

County Auditors, R. B. Diehl, L. B. Slaybaugh and Geo. B. Aughinbaugh. District Attorney, Robt. E. White. Directors of the Poor, Jacob E. Sharlets and M. A. L. Trostle.

A very enjoyable dance was given by the Gettysburg Dancing Club in the Sons of Veterans Armory on last Tuesday evening. The room was artistically decorated with Christmas greens and red and green streamers which gave it a very pretty and festive appearance. The music was furnished by several pieces of the Gettysburg Orchestra. The programs were given out to the guests in a novel way, being presented to each by Santa Claus, who turned out to be Norman McGuigan. About twenty couple attended and all voted it a delightful Christmas affair.

GEO. W. BAKER ELECTED

CLERK TO THE NEW BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

This Election Means a Knock-Out of D. B. Alleman by the Republican Organization.

In the organization of the Board of County Commissioners on Monday D. B. Alleman, editor of the "Adams County Independent," a combination without political principles other than to play the political game with Republicans and Democrats for the benefit of D. B. A., locked horns with the Republican organization in an attempt to dictate who should be the clerk to the County Commissioners with the result that the Republican organization wiped out the floor with the editor of the "Independent" and the last seen of him as he made tracks for his ball-wick was hardly enough to cast a shadow.

Alleman's candidate for the position of clerk to the County Commissioners was Horace Cline of Union township. The Republican organization concluded that the position did not belong to Union township, that that township was Democratic and that from the sixty Republicans in the township within a short period four officials had come. But Alleman wanted Cline without regard to reasons.

Alleman was on the ground in person conducting his fight. He had his headquarters at the Eagle Hotel. As soon as Noah Beamer arrived in town he was taken to the Eagle but he could not be persuaded to go Alleman's way. There was no way to get at Mr. Eicholtz, for the memory of the grilling given him in the "Independent" during the campaign made him hostile to purposes of Alleman.

The Republican organization had been leaving nothing undone for weeks to advance the candidacy of Geo. W. Baker for the clerkship. When the time came for organization of the Board a dead-lock faced the Republican organization and Alleman.

A few minutes before the noon hour, the new County Commissioners, Noah Beamer, S. McC. Eicholtz and Samuel G. Keagy met in the private room of the commissioners. On motion of S. McC. Eicholtz Noah Beamer was made President of the Board and on motion of Noah Beamer, S. McC. Eicholtz was made secretary. J. Donald Swope was elected solicitor to the commissioners, Dr. J. P. Dalbey physician to the jail, and Isaac Carter, colored, janitor at the Court House. S. Miley Miller, Geo. W. Baker and Horace Cline were put in nomination and two ballots were taken before dinner as to the clerkship, resulting in one vote for Miller, one for Baker and one for Cline.

During the noon hour Alleman already feeling the bumps he was getting in being wiped up by the Republican organization, realized that he had to knuckle when the time came. When the Board convened in the afternoon a motion carried that nominations should close. Three ballots then taken resulted in one vote for Miller, one for Baker and one for Cline. Before the fourth ballot was taken Mr. Eicholtz appealed to his associates that it was their business to get together and make the appointment and not force him to take a hand. The fourth ballot resulted in two votes for Baker and one for Miller.

The County Commissioners met with the County Auditors, R. B. Diehl, L. B. Slaybaugh and Geo. B. Aughinbaugh and the two boards voted that the salary of County Treasurer Geo. E. Spangler should remain as it has been for many years, 2 1-2 per cent. on county funds, and 1 1-2 per cent. on State funds.

Employees Banquetted.

On last Saturday evening the Reaser Furniture Company gave a banquet in honor of its employees at the Hotel Gettysburg. In the new dining room of the hotel covers were laid for the 114 employees of the company with the officers and directors and it was an inspiring sight to look upon the fine body of men who have made this plant, the first great industrial success of the town. An elaborate menu was served and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

After the feasting, Mr. C. S. Reaser, the general manager of the company, took charge as toastmaster and in speaking of the success of the plant gave credit to the co-operative loyal spirit of the employees. Toasts were responded to as follows: Wm. Arch. McClean "On General Management," Rev. J. B. Baker, "Why Should We be Loyal to Our Employers?" J. L. Williams, Esq., "What is Derived by the Town from the Furniture Plant," and J. D. Keith, Esq., "The Plant from the Point of View of its Directors and Stockholders." High tribute was paid Mr. Reaser who came here four years ago, took over a plant employing 17 men, loaded with liabilities and in that time had built up a plant until it represented an inventoried value of over $125,000, with a yearly output of $150,000, a weekly payroll of from $1,000 to $1,200 to 114 employees and with a first dividend recently declared. Mr. Keith in his toast outlined an increase of stock contemplated in which an opportunity would be given to every employee to become financially interested in the plant.

A TALK WITH GOV. WILSON

THE PEOPLE AT LARGE DISCONTENTED WITH PRESENT RULE

Progressive Democracy the Remedy for Evils of Tariff and the Trust.

On the day before Christmas the following interview with Gov. Woodrow Wilson was printed by the "New York World," giving a delightful picture of that great Democrat who is doing yeoman service in the solution of the political problems of the age:

A quizzical smile stole over the intellectual features of Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, as he leaned back in his chair and repeated the question: "What is a progressive Democrat?"

The former President of Princeton University paused for a moment, unhooked his eyeglasses from a little gold catch on his vest and, holding them in his hand to emphasize his reply, said:

"I can best answer that question by first trying to define Republican. I do not mean a progressive Republican—for a progressive Republican is only a Republican in a way to become a Democrat—but an orthodox Republican, still dominated by the older standards of his party.

"A orthodox Republican is a man who really believes that the government of the country ought to be a sort of trusteeship; that those who have the biggest material stake in its industrial affairs should be the trustees, and that all policy should be made to conform to their judgment and interest, in the expectation that as trustees they will hand on to those whom their enterprise controls a fair and reasonable share of the prosperity of business.

"Now a progressive Democrat is a man who sees, what ought to be patent to everybody, that these self-constituted trustees have been both blind and selfish; that a dangerous and inequitable system of business has been built up and that changes must be effected which will square the commercial and industrial methods of the country with the general interest, the interest of the people at large, as understood by the people themselves and not by special coteries. When the representatives of 'big business' think of the people they do not include themselves."

Gov. Wilson was speaking in low, well modulated tones. His voice has a particular charm, even in ordinary conversation; it is admirably pitched and has retained more than a trace of Southern softness. His diction reminds one forcibly of Sir Henry Irving's. Classic is the only word that describes it.

"What policies characterize a progressive Democrat? All those policies whose object is to wrest government from the control of special groups of men and restore it to the control of the general opinion of the country. All the policies that reestablish the connection between Representatives and the people. All well-considered measures that will tend to re-establish general opportunity and freedom of enterprise."

The good natured but rather cold blooded face grew stern, almost grim, and with an evident realization of the difficulties to be overcome, the Governor went on:

"It will need wide, common counsel to work such policies out. No one class or group of men can work them out alone. The man of affairs and the politician must come into conference with the student and the ardent reformer."

"Do you not think that there is everywhere manifest a very great discontent with existing conditions?" was the next question.

"Most assuredly. It is discontent with the trusteeship and its results. A humorous twinkle in the Governor's eye and the most genial of smiles relieved the bluntness of the answer. Governor Wilson's expression changes quickly. A moment before it had been grim; now it was beaming.

"Well, Governor, is the discontent greater in the West than in the East?"

"I do not think so. The difference seems to me to be that in the West a clear perception of the real facts of the situation and a conviction of the need of intelligent change has penetrated all classes; while in the East those who are at the top of our industrial system stand stubborn and unconvinced."

"What do you think of the increase in the Socialist vote?"

"I cannot give my own impression about it better than by quoting what a Socialist acquaintance of mine in Nebraska said to me last May when I passed through Nebraska on my way westward. At Wymore while the train lingered some fifteen minutes I had the pleasure of talking with the very frank and intelligent young Mayor of the town. He is a Socialist. When I asked him how he interpreted the vote by which he had been elected he said: 'Why, I think, sir, that it was about 20 per cent. Socialist and 80 per cent. protest.'"

"There is a rapidly growing body of voters who are utterly disgusted with those who have controlled political affairs, because they have seemed unable or unwilling to do anything to meet and correct the evident situation of things."

From Gov. Wilson's manner there could be no doubt that he has abundant confidence in his own ability to meet and correct the existing evils. So the next question was:

"Is the demand of business men to be 'let alone' reasonable in the circumstances?"

Gov. Wilson loved for a moment with a pencil on the desk and said:

"The demand does not come from the rank and file; it comes from those who have created the very conditions we wish to correct. They wish—so far as I can make their program out—to have the government accept the consequences of what they have done, legalize them and assume control of them, without the least effort at correction.

"There is nothing the matter with the mass of business in this country. It is as sound as it ever was. No change contemplated need touch ordinary business men at all, except to set them free of some of the trammels and disadvantages under which they now labor. The very object in view is to set business free—free from the control of the few—and then let it alone to follow its own right laws.

"It is not for those who have created the mischief to cry out to be let alone. They are thinking of themselves, not of the country. Legitimate processes of business will never be interfered with by legislation. If business, as now embarrassed, were let alone it would be let alone to continue upon a basis upon which business can never safely rest—the basis of universal distrust and suspicion."

With more feeling than he had previously displayed, Gov. Wilson sat up in his chair, raised his hands in a gesture of demonstration and, speaking in the low, emphatic voice of the well-trained lecturer, asked a series of earnest questions:

"Who are the business men of the country? Are not the farmers business men? Are not the small traders business men? Is not the sub-contractor a business man as well as the contractor in chief; the man who is building up enterprise as well as the man who has built it up? Is not the man whose credit is small and on the make a business man as well as the man whose credit is unlimited and established? Is not every employer of labor, every purchaser of material and every master of any enterprise, big or little, and every man in a profession, a business man?"

"These smaller men, who constitute the body of the nation, so far as business is concerned, do not want to be let alone. They want to be set free of artificial trammels, of high prices and of the restricted opportunities that have been created by our tariff walled system of privilege."

Gov. Wilson's scholarly features were lighted up with enthusiasm. He is not—at first sight—a man of very commanding personality. His geniality wins immediate sympathy, but his individuality is cloaked by a very unostentatious manner and democratic bearing. He is not an inspired genius who proceeds to force his views upon those surrounding him; on the contrary, his mind is of a very formative character and his opinions are slowly and gradually evolved as the result of investigations and experiences. He is a man who does nothing hastily.

"The very antithesis of Roosevelt" is perhaps the most accurate and concise description that can be given of Woodrow Wilson. It is true both mentally and physically. Gov. Wilson is a man who ponders long and carefully before he acts, he is modest and unassuming to a degree, and he is accurate in his speech and truthful in his statements. Also he means what he says.

Physically the Governor of New Jersey is a tall, spare man, one might almost call him lean. He has long limbs, a long neck and a very long, narrow, big boned face, with a high forehead and long, square jaw. The ears are somewhat overnormal in size, with very small lobes, and are large and well rounded at the top. They are set high up on the sides of the head, and this, with the prominent cheekbones and aggressive chin, give the jaw an appearance of great length.

The face is a pleasing one. Very refined but not exactly handsome, and yet it is hard to tell why. The eyebrows are beautifully arched and the mouth is uncommonly well shaped for a man. It is sensitive but firm. The eyes are blue gray, and although generally very kindly, at times take on a hard, piercing expression. The tip of the nose is most mobile and twitches whenever the Governor lays emphasis on a word.

Gov. Wilson's reference to "our tariff walled system of privilege" suggested the question:

"What is to be the greatest issue of the coming campaign?" There was no hesitation in Governor Wilson's answer.

"The tariff, of course. It must be so by its very nature. No frank mind can doubt that the great systems of special privilege and monopolistic advantage that have been built up have been built up upon the foundation of the tariff. The tariff question is at the heart of every other economic question we have to deal with, and until we have dealt with that properly we can deal with nothing in a way that will be satisfactory and lasting."

Gov. Wilson is for a "tariff for revenue only" first, last and all the time. He believes that tariff revision is the most pressing need of the country and that the people are right in their determination to settle this question unequivocally at the coming election. In reply to a question as to what value he attaches to President Taft's Tariff Board Gov. Wilson said:

"So far the Tariff Board has served chiefly as an excuse for delay in doing things which it was obviously fair and necessary to do. It may do things which it was obviously fair and necessary to do. It may serve a very useful purpose in supplying information, especially statistical information. At least it will so soon as it is given authority to obtain authentic information. At present it cannot command it. It can only ask for it. No one need supply it with facts who does not wish to.

"All economists agree that there can never be any such thing as an expert tariff board. There is no expert in the business of the entire country. There can be no such thing as an expert in the general readjustment of the tariff schedules.

"In the somewhat rough and ready and experimental readjustments that it will be necessary to make the judgment of an experienced committee of Congress is as good as the judgment of a professional board. The question, then, is one of statesmanship."

"Since it is a question of statesmanship the principle to be followed is that in a country of developed commerce and industry the only legitimate object of duties on imports is revenue for the support of the government. We have under our federal system a great many governments to support. Direct taxes must for the most part be left to the individual States. The Government at Washington must depend chiefly on indirect taxes.

"But a greater system of industry has, as a matter of fact, been built up on the basis of protective tariff, and the question of statesmanship ahead of us is one of fairness and good judgment. It is a question of expediency in the large sense of that word. Where shall we bring our tariff duties to a revenue basis at once? Where must we go slowly and ease the process off by well considered, gradual measures of reduction?"

"The economic life of the nation is a very delicate, very sensitive fabric. We are all business men, as I have just been pointing out. What affects the business of the country affects all of us. Whatever changes may be made must be made in the interest of all; must be thoughtfully considered and carefully squared with actual circumstances."

"With regard to some schedules it is already abundantly evident what it is just and necessary to do. Congress in the special session showed that it understood which they were and how they ought to be dealt with. The President did not seem to understand either the spirit and purpose of Congress or the temper and opinion of the country."

"But Governor, it is being urged that the interests of the East and West are divergent as to the tariff. Do you think that is so?"

"No, the interests of the East and the West do not seem to me to be divergent in any important matter of national policy."

"What effect has the tariff had on wages?" Gov. Wilson was next asked. "Very little directly. When wages have risen they have generally risen more in response to the demand of organized labor than from any other cause. The men who have chiefly profited by the tariff have not many of them voluntarily shared its benefits with their workmen. The workmen of the country have been grossly deceived about this matter from the first. But, fortunately for the country, their eyes are being opened now to the real facts and to the real forces that are at work."

A pile of reports of investigating committees and of the Department of Commerce and Labor on the Governor's desk was evidence of the interest he takes in the so-called "trust problem." It suggested the next line of questioning.

"How are the trusts to be dealt with?"

"The tariff lies at the bottom of much of the trust question. That is the reason why the tariff question is the central and dominating question. It is behind the shelter of the tariff wall that the trusts have been able to build up a system by which they have limited opportunity and all but shut the door upon independent enterprise."

"Will the reduction of the tariff schedules by which the greatest trusts thrive virtually solve the trust question then?"

"By no means. It will do a vast deal to cut away the artificial advantages upon which the trusts depend for establishing monopoly; but there is something beyond that. Looked at from the side of business organization the trusts are chiefly a means of economy and efficiency. It is from that side that they are so vigorously and persuasively defended by their advocates and by many thoughtful students of modern economic effort. But along with their efficient organization goes a tremendous power, and they have used that power to throttle competition and establish virtual monopoly in every market that they have coveted."

"Do you think, Governor, that competition can be re-established by law?"

"It is not necessary to answer that question until we have done what the law certainly can do. The methods by which the greater trusts have driven competitors out of business are well known. So are also the methods by which those who have financed them have seen to it that those who tried to establish rival enterprises were prevented from doing so. There are lawyers available who can describe these methods with abundant precision in statutes. Those methods can be made criminal offenses and the monopolistic use of trusts can be stopped by the punishment of every person who tries to make such use of their power."

"Guilt is always personal, and we shall never get at the root of these things by changing merely the size and organization of our business corporations. The offenses they have been committing against freedom of opportunity and of enterprise are well known and can be put a stop to. It is not a question of their size, but of

Backache caused much suffering and there were pains in the side which made lifting an impossibility. The kidney secretions were also too frequent in passage. ## Electric Bitters

Succeed when everything else fails. In nervous prostration and female weakness they are the supreme remedy, as thousands have testified. FOR KIDNEY, LIVER AND STOMACH TROUBLE it is the best medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of those experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds his cow for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nourishment is impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

THE JANUARY MAGAZINES

GETTYSBURG STORY BY MISS ELSIE SINGMASTER.

The Lincoln Memorial in Washington is Boosted Before Final Decision is Made as to Lincoln Way.

The Magazines for the opening numbers of the new year contain matter of much interest to Pennsylvanians and specially to our own community. Story by Miss Elsie Singmaster.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE has a Gettysburg story by Miss Elsie Singmaster entitled "Gunner Criswell." It is a story founded on fact and illustrates her genius for the short story. It is located at the time of the dedication of the Pennsylvania Monument when two veteran friends return to Gettysburg, the loquacious one to find his name on the bronze tablet and the quiet one who lost his sight in an explosion on the battlefield of Gettysburg to discover that his name had been omitted from the tablet of his Battery. The following picture of Gettysburg is given.

"Gettysburg opens wide not only its hospitable arms, but its heart, to the old soldier. Even now after forty-seven years, the shadow of war is not yet fled away, the roaring of the guns of battle is not stilled. The old soldier finds himself appreciated, admired, cared for, beyond a merely adequate return for the money he brings into the town. Here he can talk of the battle with the proprietor of the hotel at which he stays, with the College professor, with the urchin on the street. Any citizen will leave his work to help find a certain house where wounds were dressed, or where women gave out bread fresh and hot from the oven, or a certain well from which life-saving, delicious drinks were quaffed.

The CENTURY Magazine has a special article on "The Proposed Lincoln Memorial" in Potomac Park in Washington and MEXCEY'S Magazine has an article on Washington, in which the same Memorial is exploited and it looks as if the opponents to the Lincoln Way were trying to make Magazine capital for their Washington Memorial.

A Great National Memorial.

At last a great memorial is to be erected at Washington to commemorate the life and character of Abraham Lincoln. For this memorial Congress has authorized an expenditure of two million dollars, the largest amount ever appropriated for a similar purpose, and there is reason to believe that when it is completed it will satisfy not only the popular ideal, which demands grandeur and beauty, but also the more instructed taste of those who require of such a memorial peculiar fitness and who realize the obligation to make it in every respect worthy alike of the nation and the man. From Leila Mechlin's "The Proposed Lincoln Memorial" in the January CENTURY.

E. A. Abbey was Always a Good American.

He was born in Philadelphia, on April 1, 1852. He was educated there. At the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts he took the first steps in his artistic training. His loyalty to the scene of his birth and early upbringing must have been fostered, too, by certain historical associations in his profession. Other men of Pennsylvanian origin before him had developed their careers in London, in ways not dissimilar from those marking his own success there. Benjamin West and Charles Robert Leslie had both fixed Pennsylvania names in the roster of the Royal Academy. Looking back over that life that came so untimely to an end, in London, on August 1, 1911, one is impressed by its range and fertility, and is moved to reflect on how intensely like his own people Abbey was, for all that he made his home in the Old World, and spent so much of his time in the interpretation of the least modern side of its genius. I find his Americanism coming out very strongly in what I can only describe as his wonderful driving power.

All the work that he did for many years was at bottom a preparation for that with which he rounded out his busy life, the mural paintings for the capital building at Harrisburg. From "Abbey's Last Mural Paintings," by Royal Cortissoz, in the January SCRIBNER.

The Magic of the Clean Page.

It is because we are touched by the magic of the clean page that we begin each year with the cheery salutation, "I wish you a Happy New Year!" We dare say it to everybody. No matter what the old year was, we still expect bright things from the new one. Even to those whom the old year has battered and mangled, we are bold to give jubilant greetings. This is because of the native hopefulness of the soul. We instinctively believe in the goodness of the Eternal, and because God is King of all souls and all years, we know that numberless lovely things are possible. No one can be a fatalist on New Year's. On that first day of the year we are certain of our freedom. We can get out of our rut. We can escape from our prison. The sight of the clean page cleanses the eyes. The unstained whiteness of it stirs the nerves of faith and hope and love, and for a day, at least, we experience the sense of joy and liberty of the sons of God.

In many ways the new year will be like the old. We shall do many things we have often done before, and not a few of the old year's experiences will be repeated. But in the midst of the old surroundings and the old joys and labors there will be many a surprise, for someone else besides ourselves has His hands upon the year, and we cannot tell therefore, what a day is going to bring forth. It is possible to surprise oneself by rising to new heights of spiritual power and vision. A fresh glory bursts from prosaic and routine duties when they are performed with a heightened fidelity, and dull tasks sparkle when gripped by hands which have in them the glow of a deepened consecration. It is the spirit which makes old things new, and nothing in the new year remains what it was in the old, to a soul which is advancing. We see the landscape in an altered light at every increase of altitude, and the new year cannot be what the old one was to one who views life in a corrected perspective. To do the old things with a finer spirit, to travel the old road with a kinder heart, to hitch one's wagon to a higher star, this is sure to add another hue to the rainbow and a new perfume to the spring. —January WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

California Byways.

In a delightfully breezy and entertaining article "Two Byways of Southern California" in the January issue of SUBURBAN LIFE MAGAZINE, Winifred Ballard Blake, the author, describes a trip that is so attractive that it sounds almost too good to be true. She says, in part, "not for dance and gaiety and the crowd, but for rest and utter peace and for the charm of Nature's most exquisite moods, come to old San Buenaventura (now modernized to Ventura-by-the-Sea), and visit this quiet and secluded spot, some mile or more from the clean, attractive, sleepy town where the old Spanish mission built in 1781 still stands, and where 'sweet meandering Spanish names' still predominate."

If Small Boys are Properly Trained War Will Disappear.

There is an important and interesting article in the January AMERICAN MAGAZINE, entitled "World Scouts." It contains the news of a movement now spreading over England and Europe and bound to take hold in this country. This new movement is an outgrowth of the Boy Scout movement. The idea is that the boys of all nations, if trained to disbelieve in war, will grow up to use their influence against international conflict. Following is a brief extract from the article:

"The Boy Scout is trained to believe in two artificial, false, old-fashioned and utterly exploded ideas—ideas that the world has no use for. First, he is taught to believe in the existence of a large class of beings called foreigners. Second, that it is normal, right, and above all very glorious and interesting to oppose these beings occasionally in the institution called warfare.

"The World Scout, on the other hand, is in these respects not trained at all. He is simply allowed and encouraged to keep the natural, true, clear vision of human beings that he was born with. He is permitted to grow up in the plain natural truth that there are no foreigners, and that warfare—modern warfare—is neither glorious nor interesting, but, on the contrary, very sordid and stupid."

The Average Fancier's Bird.

The average American poultry keeper needs fowls that combine the qualities of good laying and good meat production and that are hardy. He doesn't want Leghorns, because Leghorns make poor roasters, nor Cochins, since they amount to little as layers. The Orpingtons, big, handsome birds, have white skin and legs, whereas the fixed American market demand is for yellow. The flesh of the Plymouth Rock, which is an excellent winter layer, is of coarse texture, and Rock hens go broody too hard and too often. Wyandottes don't give quite enough eggs, and those that they do give are irregular in color and shape.

In fact, the absolutely perfect combination fowl has not appeared; there is always some fault in evidence, or some quality lacking. I think that the breed which comes nearest, so far, to the general-purpose ideal is one that not so long ago was despised, but that now is rising to wide popularity: the Rhode Island Reds. The Reds are first of all utility birds; that the best specimens make fine showbirds has been fortunate, but their strongest appeal, and greatest value, is to the average poultryman who wants to get from his chickens a fair meat and egg profit, and perhaps a bit of fun and an occasional sale at a fancy price in the show-room. —Arthur S. Wheeler, in the January OUTING

GOOD RECORD.
 In the retirement of the outgoing Board of County Commissioners, J. A. Kane, Z. H. Cashman and Wm. K. Weikert, the Compiler desires to add to what was said last week about all the officials. This outgoing board deserves great credit for their careful and economical administration of the affairs of the county. They have done pre-eminent services along this line. A county paper during the last campaign printed an absolute falsehood about the Board in stating that they had raised the tax rate, and so made possible their showing. Any publisher who had any care or conscience for the truth could easily have informed himself as to the truth when the tax had been raised and would have discovered that a growing debt led to the change of a 3 to a 4 mill rate six years ago, and that the rate of 4 mills had been in force for two full years before the Board composed of Messrs. Kane, Cashman and Weikert came into office. These officers as the records show faced a situation where the net liability of the county had been increasing each year on a 4 mill tax rate and with the same rate this Board reduced the net debt in two years' time nearly $20,000. It is a good, clean, careful, economical county housekeeping deserving the approval of every taxpayer and it is a record to be commended to the new Board to study and follow.

TWO PRISONERS CAPTURED

PITTENTURF AND BRANNON CAUGHT AT HUNTER'S RUN.

After Less than 24 Hours Freedom and Must Face New and Serious Charges.

James Pittenturf and John Brannon two of the three prisoners who escaped from the Adams county jail are back in jail facing heavy penalties for their less than 24 hours of freedom. They took desperate chances to gain their freedom, and desperate chances to keep at large and as a result can expect long terms in the Penitentiary for their misdeeds.

Sheriff Fissel and all acquainted with the facts of the escape from the jail believe that the scheme was probably hatched by Pittenturf. The sheriff says that after telling the prisoners to go to their cells all obeyed but Pittenturf and Brannon remained at the doors of their cells evidently waiting for what was going to happen and admitting their knowledge of the attempt to be made to escape are accessories before the fact to the charge of assault with intent to kill, and to the offense of jail breaking, the two charges which have been made against them by County Detective Charles H. Wilson.

In their flight Pittenturf and Brannon went together and there are a number of reasons pointing to them as responsible for the burglary of the store of Thomas Brothers at Biglerville and Z. J. Peters recognized a coat which Brannon was wearing as being his property and taken from the warehouse at Guernsey. The two captured prisoners also face the charge of burglary made against them on the information of Mr. Peters. With these three new charges against Pittenturf and Brannon and the conviction of Pittenturf for the Hoar robbery, the two will become charges on the county at the Penitentiary for many years to come.

The capture of the two prisoners was cleverly and expeditiously accomplished. On Tuesday of last week, Sheriff Fissel and County Detective Wilson kept the phone wires busy to all parts of the county. Chief of Police Shealer went in the early train to Carlisle with understanding that he would go to Harrisburg. If no trace was found and he did not hear differently from Gettysburg. About noon the news came to town of two men having been seen going toward Good-year.

When Shealer called up Wilson about one o'clock he was given the news and was told to get Cumberland County Detective Harry J. Bentley and go to Hunter's Run. This Officers Shealer and Bentley did, spending about two hours at that station waiting for the men. Finally they were seen to come down the track toward the station. It was about five o'clock when Pittenturf and Brannon were passing the station at Hunter's Run and were taken completely by surprise when Officers Shealer and Bentley came out of the station each with two revolvers pointing at them. As Pittenturf was in the act of taking his hands out of his pockets, Chief Shealer ordered, "Leave your hands where they are." An eye witness declared the capture a tame affair, the two prisoners being so cleverly taken by surprise that there was no alternative but to tamely submit.

Within five minutes after the arrest the 4 o'clock train out of Gettysburg reached Hunter's Run with Detective Wilson, Deputy Sheriff Geo. Fissel, William Tipton and Joseph Winnington special deputies on board. Learning of the capture these officers went on to Mt. Holly Springs where they met Officers Shealer and Bentley with their prisoners. They were brought to Gettysburg on the 9:09 train and a crowd of several hundred people were on hand at the depot to greet the officers upon their successful capture.

Upon a search of the prisoners $7.56 was found on Pittenturf which is believed to be the balance of money taken from the Guernsey warehouse after expenditures made for clothing and food.

Joseph Gordon, the prisoner who assaulted Sheriff Fissel, has not been located, though the officials have sent broadcast the news of the escape with descriptions of the man. He is known to have taken the Chambersburg pike and was seen between McKnightstown and Cashtown by Guy Keller, of whom he asked his coat and hat, to be refused. Reports have come of a man answering his description seen near Charman and it is feared that he has reached the main line of the W. M. R. R. and has put many miles between himself and this place.

DEATHS AT ADVANCED AGES

A GOOD MOTHER OF GETTYSBURG IN HER 88TH YEAR.

A Well Known Lower End Democrat Abraham Thoman in His 90th Year.

MRS. CATHERINE ELIZABETH (SEVOYER) BREIDENBAUGH died at her home on Carlisle St. shortly after three o'clock on last Friday morning. She was in her 88th year and had been in frail health for several years and on last Thursday morning received a paralytic stroke. She was a native of Newville and was married to Edward Breidenbaugh in 1847 when he was serving as pastor of his first charge in that town. The family came to Gettysburg in 1865 when her husband became pastor of St. James Lutheran church. Mrs. Breidenbaugh ever took an active part in church work and in the charity work of the town and was held in highest esteem by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at 2:15 with interment in the Evergreen Cemetery. She leaves a son and daughter. Dr. Edward S. Breidenbaugh of this place and Mrs. Wm. A. Shipman of Johnstown.

ABRAHAM H. THOMAN, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Berwick township, died at his home near Abbottstown, Wednesday, Dec. 27, from pneumonia, aged 89 years, 5 months and 16 days. He is survived by one son, Josiah M. Thoman of Hanover, and three daughters, Mrs. Susan Danner of Berwick township, Mrs. Abigail Renoll of Hamilton township, and Mrs. Anna Hale, at home. Mr. Thoman was a descendant of the old Thoman family that came to this country from Bubendorf, Canton Basel, Switzerland, during the year 1723 and settled at what is now Ephrata, Lancaster county, where they remained until 1763. Then they moved to York county and later the decedent came to Adams county. The decedent spent his early life on his father's farm and at a youthful age taught school in Heidelberg township, York county. Later he learned the milling trade, after which he and his brother Anthony Thoman bought a mill near Seitzland, York county where he continued milling until the death of his wife, who was Miss Maria (Polly) Moul. He was married for the second time to Miss Rebecca Willdasin, after which he removed to Paradise township, York county, and began farming, continuing as a most successful farmer for a period of about 30 years, when his second wife died. In 1880 he was again married, his third wife being Miss Catharine Wolf, whose death occurred three years ago. Mr. Thoman was a member of the Reformed Church and manifested a great interest in the work of the church. In politics he was a Democrat, and from time to time held positions of trust in the communities in which he resided. Funeral was on Saturday, Dec. 29, services in the Reformed Church at Abbottstown and interment in the Lutheran cemetery, Abbottstown, Rev. W. A. Korn officiating.

SAMUEL R. McALLISTER died on Tuesday morning at the McAllister home, about two miles south of town, aged 80 years. He was a veteran of the Civil War, serving in Co. B, 21st Pa. Cavalry. He is survived by two brothers and two sisters, Calvin in the West, Hon. Theo. McAllister of this place, and Misses Agnes J. and Martha with whom decedent lived.

CHARLES C. NACE, son of the late Leo P. Nace, died on Thursday morning, December 28, 1911, at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. S. Lau, Falls Road, Baltimore, Md. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. S. Lau, Baltimore, and three brothers, John F. Nace, Baltimore, Samuel F. Nace and William T. Nace of Guilford, this county. Interment was made at Hanover, Saturday, December 30.

REV. DR. JOHN A. HOFFHEINS, a prominent minister of the Reformed Church, died at his home in Martinsburg, W. Va., on Friday, December 29, from acute indigestion. He was aged about 74 years. Deceased was a native of Abbottstown, and a son of Rev. and Mrs. Emanuel Hoffheins. He was graduated from Franklin and Marshall College and the Reformed Theological Seminary at Lancaster. His first charge was at Carlisle, later at Pottsville, and during the past 36 years served as pastor of the Reformed Church in Martinsburg. Rev. Dr. Hoffheins was very prominent in all affairs of the church and received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from his Alma Mater when yet a young man. Dr. Hoffheins was president of the Pen-Mar Reunion Association of the Reformed Church since its organization 25 years ago. ### Emmitsburg Post Office Cleaned Out

Early last Thursday morning, presumably between two and three o'clock, a robbery was committed at the Emmitsburg post-office. Cracksmen entered the building and having blown the safe made away with everything they wanted.

The burglary was not discovered until John A. Horner, postmaster, opened the office at the usual hour. Mr. Horner saw the door of the safe was blown off and upon investigation discovered that all the money, stamps, registered mail and private papers had been taken. The plunder was thrown into a mail sack and carried off. Six hundred and fifty one cent stamps and an equal number of two's were found lying on the floor, and a number of stamp-books were left undisturbed in the safe.

In addition to the five registered packages, (four for delivery and one outgoing) and a blank money order book containing 200 orders, the following was taken: Stamps, $946.26; stand cash, $253; money order cash, $71.37; private funds, $17.00; Red Cross Seal funds, $5.00; box rents, $4.00. Total amount, $1,296.63.

That the robbers were professionals is evident from the cleverness with which they went about their work. They entered the room by the front door in the bright glare of the gasoline light above the fountain, forcing the door with a crowbar or jimmy. Nitroglycerine was used to dislodge the door of the safe. Some of the explosive ran down and soaked in the flooring. Soap had been used around the edges of the door, and part of a cake of soap, some cotton, and a few inches of fuse were found in the room. No other clues were left.

Several persons living in the vicinity of the Postoffice remember hearing a dull report between two and three o'clock, but no one thought to investigate, assuming that it was but the discharge of a revolver by some holiday reveller.

Week of Prayer.

The Week of Prayer for 1912 was fixed for the first week of the year instead of the second week and offerings will go to local charities. Saturday evening the concluding service of the week will be held in the United Brethren church, the pastor, Rev. S. R. Ludwig, preaching the sermon.

WIDOWS BY WIRE
By CLAUDINE SISSON
Two separate telephone companies, each striving for the business, entered the village of Milford at the same time. The inhabitants welcomed the agents, but at the same time saw the opportunity to get cheap communication with the outside world. The agent of one company reduced rates a fourth, but no one would sign a contract. The second agent went one-fourth better, but still no signers. There were twenty-two families that wanted telephones, and half a dozen farmers would follow suit, but all were waiting for Judge Wragg!

Judge Wragg was justice of the peace, and the big man of Milford. What he said went. In this instance, he advised the people to wait until he gave the word. The judge was sixty years old, but hale and hearty. He was a widower, and was always talking of getting married, and folks said that the reason he didn't marry was because he considered it too hard work to ride around the country and do the preliminary courting.
The telephone agents soon made up their minds that they must do something special for the judge to get another subscriber. One of them finally offered him low rates, and then no rates at all, but the big man of the town thought the matter over for half a day and then replied:
"No, I guess not. Come to think of it, postal cards cost only a penny apiece, and if I want to hold communication with any one I can do it through the postoffice. A little slower, maybe, but more satisfactory. In speaking through the telephone one is liable to make mistakes, but in writing it's different. No, I guess I don't care for a telephone. I hear they are always getting out of repair anyhow."

"But we'll keep 'em in repair at our own expense," urged the agent.

Judge Wragg, Justice of the Peace.

"Why, man, suppose you want to call a doctor in a hurry?"
"Never needed one in a hurry. Always had lots of time."
"But you surely want to call up people over at Highdale now and then?"
"No, can't say as I do. Don't know but three or four men over there, and they don't amount to shucks."
Three days passed, and the agent who had made the last and best offer was in despair. He could have offered the judge graft, but he feared to do it. It had been tried by other men and brought them a bad turning-down.

"In the name of heaven, man, what is it you want?" he finally asked as he determined on a last effort.
"Nothing 'tall, neighbor," he calmly replied.
"But I've offered to give you a telephone out-and-out for two years."
"Yes, but there's such a thing as legal contracts."
"What do you mean?"
"I never take another man's word, even on the weather. Black and white's the thing. When you've got an agreement on paper folks is bound to stand by it."

"But I'm ready to make a legal agreement, and the company will back me. Write out whatever seems good to you."
"Well, that's talking to the point," replied the judge, and the agent was asked to call the next day.
The man was only too glad to do so. He found an agreement that not only gave the judge the constant use of a telephone for two years, with all repairs to be made with promptness and without expense to him, but it was stated that he had the first call on the wire, and that he was not to be cut in on. Day or night the wire was to be at his command.

It was a cast-iron contract, but such was the rivalry between the companies that it was duly signed. It was figured that the judge would use the thing as a plaything for awhile and then drop it, as nearly all other people do. There was a wide veranda in front of his house, and he fixed up a chair and a table and made things so he could rock back and forth and talk into the receiver at the same time. No railroad president had a more comfortable ingenook.

The telephone company soon had twenty-five subscribers, and was in communication with all the country. Then it was that Judge Wragg was heard from. Up to this time he had simply acted his voice. Now he explained himself in his General Jackson Hickory rocking chair, lifted the receiver, and after consulting the list of widows around the country he had compiled, he got central and called up one living twenty miles away. He didn't do it without some effort, however. Central answered him that the wire was busy, and he answered central with:

"You chase that party right off the wire, young lady! I come first, and you'll get into trouble if you interfere. Plain, straight legal contract that when I want the wire I climb over all!"
He got the wire and he got the widow. He told the widow who he was, and that he had some thoughts of marrying. She replied that she hadn't, and called him an old fool besides.

"Can't expect to hit 'em first time trying," he said to himself as he reached for his list and called up a second widow.
"But there are three parties waiting to phone," protested central.
"You never mind the three parties, but attend to me!" he fired back at her. "I told you only a few minutes ago that I had a legal contract giving me first use of the wire. Call up 44-J. She's a widow and may want to get married. I have no objections to your listening to the conversation."

It was brief and spicy. The judge said he had heard through a tin-peddler that she might be induced to enter the matrimonial state again, and in reply she exclaimed:
"I don't know whether you are a young fool or an old one, but I do know that if I had my hands in your hair I'd make you bald-headed afore I let go!"
"Now, widow—now, widow!" chided the judge. "seems to me to be a plain, straight question—do you want to marry or not?"
"No! No! No!"
"Oh, all right. No harm done. I thought maybe you did. You are only number two out of a list of over thirty, and I'm not a bit discouraged."

Central was then called up to ring for number three.
"I don't understand this thing at all," replied the girl in charge. "Here are half a dozen people wanting to use the wire, and you seem to think it belongs to you alone."
"And if you don't think so after reading my contract I'll eat my hat! That's what I got a contract for—so that I could seem to own the wire. Just 'tend right to your knitting, sissy, or you'll be looking for another job!"

Central telephoned to headquarters for instructions, and the contract was looked up. She was told that the judge had legal rights which must be respected, and from nine o'clock in the morning until seven at night, he was calling up widows. Next day the company engaged a lawyer to make a bluff, but it was promptly called. Then the judge was offered $500 to cancel the contract, but he shook his head and began calling up old maids. The bribe was raised to a thousand dollars, but without avail. The company stood to lose every subscriber in town, and it was a lifeman who finally solved the problem.
"Easy as grease," he said. "Find a widow who is willing to marry him and he'll have no more use for the telephone."

The man was right, and the judge still lives, and is happy with his second wife.

Spring Sale List.

The COMPILER is considered the best medium for advertising the spring sale. Sales are always printed from new type metal and it is most satisfactory service to have sale items clear. The COMPILER is a paper that is kept and read through and with a large circulation gives the spring sale advertiser exactly what he is looking for, to have a good sale.
